*Care giver policy:

A caretaker is defined as someone with the ability to make responsible decisions in an emergency, is aware of all special needs the Self Advocate may have, and be able to support bodily needs such as feeding or bathroom assistance. The caretaker is responsible for controlling behaviors as best they can, removing a Self-Advocate from a potentially dangerous situation to themselves or others, provide any medications, and ensure the Self Advocate's safety.

Caretakers must be a trained professional, guardian, capable family member, or close family friend that has the ability or training to provide above mentioned supports. A caretaker cannot be another Self Advocate. If Arc staff does not approve of the caretaker because they do not meet the caretaker guidelines and is unable to properly care for the Self-Advocate it is the responsibility of the legal guardian and or agency of care to provide an adequate substitution. The Arc Staff is not authorized to provide medical treatment, first aid, or to dispense any medication. If the Self-Advocate has any known medical issues, such as, but not limited to seizures, etc., the caretaker is required to handle these situations.
